at the age of twenty-one. His preparatory studies were pursued in the High School of Savannah, Ga., and under the Rev. George Eaton, and he graduated from the Columbian University, Washington, D. C., in 1852. He entered the Seminary at Princeton in the fall of the same year and remained two years. He was licensed by the 7th Baptist Church of Baltimore, Aug. 10, 1851, and ordained to the Baptist Ministry by four Baptist ministers at Upperville, Va., Nov. 4, 1854, being at the same time installed pastor of the Baptist church at Upperville, from which he was released Oct. 10, 1856. He combined with this pastorate the care of the church at Ebenezer, Va. He then served the following Baptist churches as pastor: Lynchburg, Va., from Oct. 20, 1856, to Dec. 1, 1858; Oakland and Hopeful, Va., from April 1, 1859, to Sept. 1, 1866; Warrenton, Va., from Oct. 1, 1866, to May 1, 1871; Broad Run and Carter's Run, Va., from 1871 to 1886. At this time ill health compelled him to abandon the active work of the ministry. After his Lynchburg pastorate he suffered from ill health and spent five months in travel. From 1867 to 1871 he was principal of the Female Institute of Warrenton, which place he made his residence from 1866 until his death, Feb. 10, 1901, at Warrenton, of the effects of the grippe, in the 72nd year of his age. He was buried at Warrenton. He received the honorary degree of D.D., from Richmond College, Va., in 1886. Dr. Wyer was moderator four or five times of Baptist associations. He published a number of tracts and newspaper articles.

He was married Sept. 16, 1855, at Levenworth, Loudoun Co., Va., to Ann Eliza Powell, who died Jan. 29, 1905. Three sons and one daughter survive him.

JACOB AMOS LEFEVRE, D.D.,

Son of Benjamin and Barbara (Weaver) Lefevre, was born Feb. 14, 1830, in Lancaster County, Pa. He made a public confession of his faith in the Methodist Church at the age of sixteen. His preparatory studies were pursued in the preparatory department of the Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, Pa., from 1844 to 1847, and he graduated from the same college in 1851, delivering the Latin salutatory at the commencement. He then spent two years as a tutor in Pennsylvania College, entering the Seminary at Princeton in 1853, remaining three years and graduating in 1856. He was licensed April 10, 1856, by the Presbytery of Baltimore and ordained by the same Presbytery Oct. 26, 1856, being at the same time installed pastor of the Franklin Square Church, Baltimore. He was released from this charge June 13, 1887, after a pastorate of thirty-one years, his only pastorate, since his health did not permit his assuming care of another church after this. He continued his residence in Baltimore until 1901, when he moved to Columbia, Mo., where he resided with one of his sons until his death, Feb. 22, 1905, in Columbia, a few days after the completion of his 75th year. His death was due to the formation of a clot on the brain. He was buried in the London Park Cemetery, Baltimore. He received the honorary degree of D.D. from Hampden Sidney College in 1871. Dr. Lefevre received many calls to other fields of labor during his single pastorate, which he declined. He was offered a professorship in Washington and Lee University, the presidency of Davidson College, a chair in Columbia Seminary and the pastorate of the Grand Avenue Church, St. Louis, Mo., but his devotion to his people and work in Baltimore would not let him leave them. He was for many years chairman of the Committee of Foreign Missions of the Southern Church, when that Committee was located in Baltimore. He was moderator of the Synod of Virginia in 1870. He published a number of sermons and review articles. After the Civil War he was connected with the Southern Church in the newly formed Presbytery of Patasco, which with the Presbytery of Rappahannock later became the Presbytery of Chesapeake. Later this in turn was divided, the churches and ministers in Maryland constituting the present Presbytery of Maryland.

He was married Oct. 19, 1858, in Baltimore, Md., to Catherine Louise Sauerwine, who with three sons survives him.

WILLIAM LEWIS MOORE, D.D.,

Son of John Lewis and Martha Burtis (Amory) Moore, was born March 10, 1833, in New York City. He made a public
