Y., from January 1900 to October 1902, and after this resided in Hackensack, N. J., until his death, which occurred Dec. 11, 1912, in Hackensack, of a disease of the liver connected with a general breaking down of his whole system, in the 81st year of his age. He was buried in Hackensack. In 1881 the degree of D.D. was conferred upon him by Hampden Sidney College, but declined for conscientious reasons. He published a Spanish translation of "Seymour's Evenings with the Romanists" in 1860, as well as a number of controversial and other pamphlets in Spanish, among these "La biblia y sus Opositores", "La Transubstanciacion", thirteen articles on Romanism, and "Libro de Orden Ecclesiastico". He published also a Spanish translation of the shorter catechism, and commentaries in Spanish on the books of Genesis and Exodus, the former being, at the time of its publication, 1902, the only Protestant Old Testament commentary in the Spanish language, but his greatest work was his Spanish version of the Bible, "La Versión moderna", the labor of many years.
