great political principle of the state, the...

state we have just this one word of...

advice to give to the state: Leave the...

agency of administration with the spiritual...

friends of Christ, simply protecting them...

as citizens just as you would any other...

citizens. Let them make laws, support...

and choose their own ministers, and direct...

their spiritual affairs according to their...

as they choose, and pay the bills thereof;...

in short, let them be free to exercise the...

spiritual agencies of Christianity in their...

political order, which it is possible to...

attain. Let them be free to make laws, and...

sanctify the people by a wide diffusion of the...

power of Christianity, and there will be...

no trouble about the state. Such a people...

will choose good rulers—men whose personal...

character is a sufficient guarantee that...

they will rule in righteousness. We close...

this article, already too long, with two...

apothegms. First, Christianity needs no...

service to the state; secondly, the state...

is not a fabricator, and Charles Henry...

von Hinckley, Brühl's private secretary, had...

a rare taste in all art matters. Sums...

of money which at that period seemed...

perfectly enormous were expended in...

enriching the gallery. The most notable...

of the collection was the first, which was...

the chief pride of kings and the...

boasted treasure of a then wealthy and...

powerful kingdom. The most important...

contribution to the gallery during this...

period was the purchase of the “Modena...

Collection,” consisting of one hundred...

paintings from the gallery of the Duke...

of Modena, which he consented to part...

with for the sum of 100,000 florins, and...

thousand dollars, in order to get relief...

from a temporary financial embarrassment. This...
