FAST SERMON.

18AIAH XXVI. 21.

For behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punifh the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: The earth also fhall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain.

THE book of Isiah is a very extensive and ancient prophecy. It was probably given at a number of times, and by the compilers of the Old Testament brought together in one book, without noting the particular times or the exact fuccession in which the feveral parts were written by the prophet. The first part of the book, mostly contains a reproof of the fins prevalent in Ifrael, and a denunciation of heavy judgments on particular nations, and on the earth generally. Some of these prophecies, have had a minute and very wonderful accomplishment. Others, a partial fulfilment, and remain yetin part to be fulfilled; and the events to which fome of them relate are yet altogether future. The fulfilment of many parts, in a manner fo exact, and fo contrary to all preceding human expectations, is furprifing to the confiderate reader; and we do not need any better proof, that the prophet spoke by an inspiration from the Omniscient and Almighty God, who governs the world, and that therefore, in due time, the whole will be accomplished.

Several names of places and people, against whom much is denounced in this prophecy, we know to be typical names; fuch as Egypt, Babylon, Edom The writings of one prophet often and others. explain another. We know that by these names, the later prophets, especially St. John in the apocalyple, meant the Roman powers, both Pagan, and Antichriftian, and the nations now fubfifting, who forung up in a diffinct state, on the diffolution of imperial Rome. Many parts of Ifaiah's denunciations, were literally fulfilled in the destruction of ancient Edom, Egypt and Babylon. Other parts, delivered under these typical names, are either at this time fulfilling, or remain in future to be accomplished.

Further, the prophet Isaiah in a great number of places, denounces a state of misery, beyond whatever had been, to go thro the whole world. Since his day, to the prefent, there hath been nothing general enough to answer the prediction. St. John, alfo in his revelation predicts the fame. This general convulfion of mankind, which by the prophetic defcription is to go thro the earth, and to be attended by diffrefs of nations, and public calamities, exceeding what had been at any time before; is by the promifes of God's word to be followed by a state of univerfal peace, called the glorious kingdom of Chrift, when men shall learn war no more, religion be felt and practifed in its purity, with all that civil and religious order, which naturally fprings from the heart's being made right, by an effusion of the spirit of God.

This fame time of a general diffrefs of nations, is alfo foretold by Chrift himfelf, and feveral of his apoftles; and they point out the period to be known when it comes, by a number of moral figns. That there fhall be little faith in the earth—men fhall be in a ftate of deep fecurity concerning their own falva.

tion and another world—the truth of the fcriptures will be much called in queftion-and multitudes will fay where is the promife of his coming, for fince the Fathers fell a fleep all things remain as they were. This diffrefs and convultion of nations, is doubtlefs to be effected by men themfelves, as inftruments in the hand of a holy and avenging God. They will punish one another. The divine threatenings of punifhment on mankind, will not be fulfilled by the interference of any miraculous agent; for all the laws of nature, and men themfelves with their paffions and wrath, are as much under the control of God.himfelf, as a miraculous agent could be if he were raifed up. Men may deftroy one another, but it is God who gives them up to do it. They are the fword ; his is the hand. Actuated by their own motives and passions, they fulfil in the most striking manner, the very revealed word of God, which they deride as the greatest folly and delusion. Their . eyes are fo shut they do not fee their own picture drawn, and the works of their hands punish their own infidel brethren. Our text expressly speaks of this time of general diffrefs, which is predicted by many other of the prophets, in many other places. For behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity : The earth alfo shall difclofe her blood, and shall no more cover her Main.

In farther difcourfing, I shall speak to the following points.

I. Whether we do not at this day, in a very remarkable manner, fee the fulfilment of this prophecy commencing.

II. Make fome remarks upon the queftion; How far this nation will probably fhare in the evil?

III. Describe the means of prefervation to be used.

In attending to these points, I shall endeavor strictly to hold myself in the place of a minister of the word of Christ, leaving political questions with those, to whom God and the people have committed them.

We first inquire, Whether we do not at this day, in a very remarkable manner fee the fulfilment of this prophecy commencing.

Though it was the defign of God, that most of the prophecies in his word, fhould remain in a great measure sealed, until the time of fulfilment, whereby those who have gone before divine providence, have fallen into many errors in defcribing the particular events of futurity; we may still suppole that the beginning fulfilment, will be attended with fuch evident figns as may teach those confiderate perfons who faithfully examine the word of God that the prediction is fulfilling. Chrift blamed the Jews of his day for not difcerning the figns of the times, and attending to the general indications of his providence and word, that they might thereby be prepared to meet him in his difpensationsto difcover his difpleafure and repent. It has already been observed, we must expect the judgments of God on the people of the earth, will be principally executed by their own hands.

To determine, whether we do at this day fee the fulfilment of those prophecies commencing, we will attend, first, to the natural; and secondly, to the moral figns of the times.—It is the providence of God which unfolds the times that are spoken of in his word.

Do not natural events predict this to be the cafe? What is the prefent ftate of those nations and countries, which have for many ages been the most influential in the world; which have had the greatest advantages put into their hands by the providence and grace of God; and doubtless have most misimproved divine goodness? Engaged in a war more bloody, more fiercely conducted, more subversive of old institutions, than hath been known in modern times. A war that feems to caft out the humanity of nature, to chill the blood of natural affection, and confound private right in general hoftility.—A war where every blow is pointed by the enthusias of passion, and men do strange things, because it is determined by a holy God that strange things shall be done. The world is already embroiled-the paffion and obfinacy of men are arifen to a higher pitch than hath been known fince the days of civilization-oppofing parties have chosen principles which can never coalefce-the caufe of contention is in its nature a general one, and must affect all nations. The modern principles of Europe are of fuch a nature, and they will not be prevented, as must go thro' all the absolute monarchies of the world. All parties fee this which makes them contend with fuch obstinacy. This is the actual state of things. And can this commotion, and confequently this mifery of nations end here? I think it cannot. There are It cannot without a miracle. the fame materials to burn thro' the whole old world, and it will fpread from building to building until the whole affumes a new form.

There is a natural preparation for this. The balance of power as it was called, which held Europe together is broken, and can never be formed anew on old principles. The old ftates loaded with an enormous debt, which will tempt the diftreffed orders of men to join in revolution, the irrefiftible diffolver of public faith.-The vast Ottoman empire trembles under the weight of age, luxury, and oppression. Its dissolution will bring a hundred new tribes of men, all feeking their own interefts, into the political and martial events of the age. The Ruffian empire of the north has fpread itfelf thro an extent, which must be the means of its own diffolution. God has permitted this for the civilization of many favage tribes, and when civilized they will refume their own rights.—The fouthern monarchies of Afia are already humbled and half conquered by the European establishments on their coafts. These establishments will soon become independent nations after the example of our own country, which must give a new political form and weight to that part of the globe. The interior of Africa continues, as it has been, much unknown : but its fhores having been under European influence or authority must deeply feel the shock. When the pile of Europe falls, the fouthern and middle regions of America, which have been under its authority cannot escape revolution From the earliest history of mankind to the present, there was never fuch a natural preparation, as at the prefent, for change-for revolution-and confequently, for the dreadful calamity of war, with all its train of evils. We know that war and revolution of nations, is in the figurative language of prophecy, fignified, by thunders, lightnings and earthquakes. The prophet John, in defcribing the progrefs and completion of the prefent period, faith. And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings ; and there was a great earthquake, fuch as was not fince men were upon the earth, fo mighty an earthquake and fo great. How many miseries must fuch a period bring forth? How many of the judgments of God upon mankind? A profpect which would be infupportable even in thought, were there not a promife, that all this will introduce by the divine management, a day in which the nations will learn war no more.

It is the lufts of men which bring the deftruction, it must be the fpirit of God to give the peace. This period of misery, will doubtles be also a period of great fin.—It is common for God to use the worst of men to execute his judgments.—The work is too dreadful to be done by christians—by men who are humane, honest and good. Such could not bring their hearts to execute sof misery. Infidels, the most unprincipled of men, who neither fear God nor regard the rights of humanity and justice, will doubtles be the instruments of executing the Lord's threatenings.—I might have added this also, as one circumstance, in the preparation for a universal desolation. There is a generation of men in the old world, rifen and rifing up, whose hearts are formed by a want of moral principle, and a difbelief of God's word and providence, to embroil the world, and fuch a generation will not be idle.

Further, it is well known and will not be denied by any, that in most of the old nations, there hath been a long continued fystem of oppression, wonderfully combined by civil power, and ecclefiaftical tyranny. A general increase of knowledge among the people hath fully difcovered this.—Multitudes have determined to bear no longer.-Their refentments are carried to an extreme. That which they have refolved in the cool deliberation of reafon, they execute in paffion.—Though a revolution in church and state, and the doing away all old institutions, may be a wife preparation in the providence of God, for good to the generations yet unborn; it must be a day of distress and blood to the immediate actors.—The moment of revolution must be a time more dreadful, than any thing, that can either go before or follow after it.-It is neceffarily a time without law, order and government.-A time in which men of daring fpirits and little principle will come forward as actors-in which men will do what is right in their own eyes, and the plagues of the human heart be acted out.-To break down the old fyftems of civil and religious power muft be a dreadful struggle, in which opposing interests will thin the human race.-

Hear another of the prophecies of Isaiah concerning the same period in chap. xxiv. It is in the following solemn words. Behold the Lord maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upfide down, and fcattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof. The Lord hath spoken this word. The earth mourneth, and fadeth away; the baughty people of the earth do languish. The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; becaufe they have transgreffed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting cou-Therefore hath the curse devoured the earth, enant. and they that dwell therein are defolate; therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left. Doubtless this prophetic description is in a degree figurative, but allowing the utmost fupposeable latitude for figures, it describes a state of awful affliction, and a multitude of fimilar defcriptions might be collected from the former and latter prophets, which do not appear to be yet fulfilled.

We have noticed a number of the natural figns of the times, and do those of a moral nature indicate any thing better? It cannot be pretended that they do. God is governing the world for the glory of his own great name. The events permitted in his providence will fhow him to be a holy God, and that he hath a cup of diffrefs for those who forget him. The Lord fleepeth not, nor are his promifes or threatenings repealed. When he bears long, and his mercies do not lead to repentance, but fix the children of men in impiety, his eventual coming will be the more dreadful. To draw a true picture of the fentiments and manners of the age in great portions of the world, which hath been called chriftian, as it respects piety, godliness, and a reverence for the law and golpel of God; it must be in lines fo black, as would look like bitternefs in the fpeaker, and must make the hearer tremble for the world, if he believes it. By multitudes the whole word of God is denied-the divinity of Jefus ridiculed-the fabbath thrown away-the ordinances of the gofpel confidered as folly-its doctrines utterly difbelieved -the very names of piety, faith, and repentance cast out-the spirit in all his operations and the neceffity of them both in convincing of fin, and for renewing the heart blafphemed-an open avowal that the holy Jehovah is much like his creatures. only more powerful and knowing-weak reafon put in the place of infinite wifdom, and even by this word reafon, little more is meant, than the wicked appetites and paffions of human nature-the fpecial providence of the Lord denied with contemptand a degree of boldness in fin that mocks at judgment and eternity. This impiety is far fpread, it fits on thrones-it fills the high feats of state-and what is more horrible still, it wears the ecclesiastical gown and mitre-pronounces the name of Jefus from lips of infidelity—with one breath it blafphemes, and the next calls the people to pray-and goes from the altar to the cell of impurity.

Is it to be wondered that the Lord of all the earth hath come forth? Could there be a more direct or wife method to introduce a new order of things than to deftroy the old? If it must be, is it not best to be done by those who fear not God.-As I before observed, the work is too bloody, too full of mifery, for the hearts or hands of christians and good men to perform. Let fuch as fear God, rejoice that Babylon is falling, but let those who are the instruments remember, that they are her limbs, and will fall with her.—The prophet John hath long fince told us it should be thus. And the ten horns which thou faweft upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh and burn her with fire, for God hath put it into their hearts to fulfil his will, until the words of God shall be fulfilled. Of this beast with its ten horns, it is expressly faid, they shall go into perdition, that is, be destroyed ; but before they are deftroyed, the corrupters of the religion of Chrift must be punished by their hands. God is now doing this his own great work .-- The general appearance of it is convincing enough, but the particular events by which it will be carried through, are hid in the womb of an infcrutable providence, and he is a rafh man who attempts to point them out.

But though God did not defign to reveal particular events in the execution of his plan, fo as to be exactly foreknown by men, nor the precife year or day of fulfilment; ftill the general iffue of things, through a progrefs made dreadful by the wickednefs of men, and terminating in a ftate of univerfal peace and holinefs, by the overruling of God's providence and fpirit, is most plainly revealed. The period is arrived, expected by thofe who have-been the most laborious, judicious and prayerful in fearching out the times spoken of in holy fcripture, for God by the out-pouring of his judgments, to make a notable preparation for the glorious kingdom of Chrift on earth.

Slowly as events have unfolded in the opinion of men, ftill it is doubtlefs true, that the wheels of his providence have been fwiftly rolling, from the time the prophecies were fpoken, to carry them into execution. God's plan is a great one. There were a thoufand preparations to be made by infinite wifdom, which now feem complete; and we may expect a rapidity of changes, in this eventful period, beyond what hath been before.

Some who think fanguinely, when they obferved revolution commencing, were ready to fuppofe, an increase of knowledge and civilized habits would bring the world to a state of great refinement and peace, without dreadful scenes of bloodss of bloods and to human reason that is not in them, and have overlooked the felfish heart of man, out of which every evil work proceeds. The heart of man is a fountain which naturally produces poisonous streams. Depraved creatures will torment each other, unless purified by the efficacious grace of God, or restrained by the authorities of civil government.

FAST SERMON.

Some others who have a pious difpofition, and firmly believe the fcriptures of God; have kept their eyes fo fixedly on the promifes of a day when the nations shall learn war no more, that they have been ready to hail revolutionary war, as the beginning of millenial peace and good will. They have overlooked the judgments, which we may both naturally and prophetically expect to antecede Chrift's univerfalreign on earth. But whatever men may think beft, God will fulfil his own word. Those who are wife will fee the figns of the times, and hear the admonition. Behold I come as a thief. Bleffed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, left he walk naked and they fee his shame-when the kings of the earth and the whole world are gathered to the battle of that great day of God Almighty.

II. I am to make fome remarks upon the queftion, how far this nation will probably share in the evil? Here curiofity and a regard to our own intereft is at once excited. A vain prefumption might fay many things, but I shall not prefume myself a prophet, or pretend to an eye that can look into futurity, to tell how events will particularly happen. Every thing that can be useful to us may be understood without this. There is a way in which we may be affured of elcaping in a good degree the bitternels of these plagues; tho we must not expect that the earth will quake, without our feeling fomething of the fhock. There is alfo a way, which will certainly bring us to participate in the very dregs of the cup. God doth not punifh without reason, and he will diftinguish, even in the day of his greatest anger, between those who fear him, and those who fear not. There will be a proportion between national fin, and national punishment. Where his name and his laws, have been most and longest forgotten the weight of his judgment will fall. He faith concerning Babylon, fo much as the hath exalted herfelf and lived delicioufly, fomuch he will bring her down, and that being wonderfully finful fhe fhall have fearful plagues. In another place the Lord faith, at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation to pluck up, and to pull down and destroy it, if that nation against whom I have pronounced, turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them. And at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, to plant and to build it, if it do evil in my sight that it obey not my voice, then I will repent of the good wherewith I faid, that I would benefit it. Falling into fin, will endanger those whose prospects have been the fairest; and repentance and reformation will featter a gathering cloud.

John in his Revelation defcribing the vials of God's wrath as they were poured on men one after another, in the conclusion of each defcription adds, Yet they repented not to give God the glory. So that by fuffering one judgment they were prepared for another.—God permits this to be the cafe with nations, when their final fubversion is intended.—It was thus with Pharaoh and his Egyptians. They did not take warning, but became more hardened, until the finishing judgment of God came upon them. We therefore have a rule given us, both by fcripture examples and a fcripture promise, to determine how God will deal with us.—We may avoid the overflowing fcourge, or we may plunge into its roughest billows.

There are fome favourable circumstances, and many unfavorable, which I will suggest. We are a new nation.—The habits of luxury have not gained the deepest footing.—Our public institutions both civil and religious are not wrought into a system of oppression.—Our land was peopled on the principles of civil and religious liberty.—The public order and institutions of religious instruction are in a good degree preferved.—And we have a civil constitution giving the greatest freedom men can enjoy.

-These are distinguishing advantages, but God can blast them if we make ourselves unworthy.

There is alfo, my hearers, the dark fide in our There are dark and ominous appearances.cafe. I do not mean the wrath and threatening of any foreign nations whatever, for if we please God and procure him to be on our fide, we may blefs his providence, and hear human threatenings without emotion.-But the dark omens are to be found at In our hearts, in our houses, in our practice, home. and in a licentious fpirit difpofed to break down civil and religious order.-In affecting to depend on reafon in the things of religion, more than the word of God; fo as to reject all evangelical holinefs, faith in Jefus Chrift the Son of God, and the ministration of the fpirit in the heart.—In fubflituting anarchy and licentiousness, in the room of rational and just liberty.-In fuppofing that freedom confifts in men's doing what is right in their own eyes; even though their eyes look through the mift of a wicked ambition and luft.—Here is our real danger, and thefe are the omens that augur ill to us, and make it appear as though we are preparing for a drought in the cup of the Lord's vengeance.

There is an excellent paffage in the proclamation which calls us together this day, which I will repeat. "At the fame time, to confider and lament the ma-"ny heinous vices, which are prevalent in our "land at this day, particularly, the increafe of infi-"delity and profanenefs—the neglect of the gofpel "of our great Redeemer—the growing indiffer-"ence to the inftitution of the Sabbath and public divine worfhip—with the increafing neglect of gofpel ordinances and benefits, and our aggravated ingratitude to God, and unfruitfulnefs towards him, under the receipt of all the rich mercies of providence and grace, with which he has been "pleafed to indulge us."——This is a picture of the times, and it is a true picture ; not drawn by clergymen, who the irreligious fay, are prejudiced by their profession to prophecy evil and fault men needlessly.—Those who can look back but a few years, know there is a great declension in all the respects that are mentioned.

What an alarming catalogue of growing fins we have mentioned! Let us look them over. " Infidelity !"—This is of various degrees, from fuch as begin to doubt or deny a part of God's word, to those who deny the whole, and throw human nature back for instruction, to its own weak reason and wicked lufts. An infidel is to be both pitied and feared -pitied as a perfon loft to his own good, and given up by his judge to the blindness of fin.—He is to be feared as an instrument of vengeance in the hand of the Lord on the land in which he dwelleth.-Those who deny God's word, his religion, his Son, his laws and ordinances, are fit inftruments to do his strange work of judgment. When we fee the inftruments forming and rifing up among us, we fhould begin to tremble for ourfelves and our children. God doth not generally prepare a rod in vain; and if we as a people are fo void of wifdom as to nourish the rod, we certainly invite the judgment which it is prepared to execute.

"The neglect of the gofpel of our great redeem-"er" is another fin, and how are this gofpel and redeemer neglected ? By every fin in our hearts and our houfes; by living in unbelief, without God in the world; by reftraining prayer before him; by denying the corruption of our own hearts; the fovereignty of his grace; and the work of his holy fpirit in convincing finners and gracioufly fanctifying the penitent unto eternal life.

"The growing indifference to the inflitution of the Sabbath, and public divine worfhip, with the increasing neglect of gospel ordinances and benefits.——The people who neglect God's Sabbath, break his covenant with them.—God told his ancient church " Wherefore the children of Ifrael shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant, it is a fign between me and the children of Ifrael forever." Neglecting the Sabbath of God, is the most direct way for families, particular places, and nations, to cut themfelves off from the right of calling the Lord their covenant God; and if we can no longer call Jehovah our covenant God, what right have we to expect his prefervation, in the day when he cometh forth from his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth.-In places, where the Sabbath of the Lord with its inflitutions fall into difuse, the spirit of piety must fail; knowledge of facred fubjects will ceafe; and a fenfe of eternal things become fmall in the mind, which is a preparation for vice and divine chastifement.

" Our ingratitude to God for past favors" is also a dark omen. The Almighty has appeared for this land in the most dark and dangerous days.-By the hands of our fathers, who were a people that feared him more than we do, he has transmitted us rich favors-has profpered in peace, and been with us in the day of alarm.---We may all worfhip as our consciences dictate. Our civil privileges are unexampled in the hiftory of the world. We annually choose our own rulers. We have had rulers of eminent wifdom and difinterestedness. Being a new people, in a new country, we had no old inftitutions of oppression to endanger and torment us. The people have had permifion and licence to make their own laws, and fay which of their own number fhould execute them. All this has been given by God. If ever a people had motives of an earthly nature to bind them to the true Jehovah, it is this.

Have we made returns of obedience to God? Let confcience answer. Have we not left the God of our fathers? Have we not begun to fay, there was too much fpirituality in their notions of religion? They fpeak too much about our lufts which we love to gratify, and make the fabbath a wearinefs to us, thro a holy observance? Have we not begun to fay, we will have a kind of religion that is more eafy, and has lefs felf-denial for corrupt human nature? I shall only propose the questions, and let confcience anfwer; but before conscience answers, let us fee the figns of the times which the providence of God is fetting before us. And what do those figns anfwer? Do they not tell us, if ye will by irreligion make yourfelves like to those nations, whom God must punish, ye shall have a part in the punishment? And is not God raifing up the inftruments of infidelity to do the work ? The rod to punish fin, always grows out of fin. Let the tree grow, and we shall find poifonous branches enough to spread death far and near.

Now let us take up the original queftion. How far are we to fhare in the plagues of the age? Juft fo far as we depart from God, his law, his word and gofpel, his fabbaths, the fpirituality of religion, and vital experimental piety. So far as we undervalue our prefent bleffings and wifh for licentioufnefs, instead of a rational and well restrained liberty, God will give us the licentious for and tell us to drink the cup; and when he gives it, his wisdom will name it, one of the vials of his wrath.

But if when tokens of anger appear, we repent before God for our paft ingratitude, and pray to him and obey him, we have his promife that he will repent of the evil that he thought to do unto us.— Thus life and death are fet before us, and which it fhall be depends on ourfelves. If, either through capricious fin, we choose the ways of death, that must be our portion; but if we walk in the ways of wildom and life, there is a gracious God to preferve us. Those who exercise their curiosity further than this, had better spend their time in repentance, than in inquiry on any other principles. Which leads me,

III. To defcribe the means of prefervation.

And this branch of the fubject is in great part anticipated by what has been already faid. If this be the day of the Lord's difpleafure with men, the means of prefervation, are to turn from all our fins and ferve him in newnefs of heart and life. In this we all have a part to act. A general reformation must be effected by the reformation of individuals.

We must take care of our own perfons, and repent before God. Let us all fubmit ourfelves to a ftrict perfonal examination of our hearts, of our lives, our treatment of God's word, fabbaths and ordinances. Let us inquire of our own confciences, whether we live those lives of piety and prayer, which they dictate to be right ?—Whether our conduct be fuch that we publicly appear to be on the fide of God, more than against him ? If we wish him to be for us, we must be for him.—If we expect the bleffings of the christian covenant, we must on our own part keep it.—But if we fall into that loose way of thinking and acting which is common among the enemies of God, he will number us among them and give us a part of their cup.

We must take care of our families. These little communities form the great public body.—As the religion of the closet gives a favor to the conduct of a christian, through the whole day; fo the religion and good government of families gives a favor to the national character for piety.—The parents, who do not indoctrinate their children in christianity, teach them the gospel, and inculcate on them its good life; are certainly bringing them up to be the inftruments of God's anger in punishing men.

Let us all reverence the word of God, and our old inftitutions of piety, which made our fathers bleffed in life, and invited down on them the protection of the Almighty. Whatever new things we find in the prefent day, we fhall never find a better religion, law or gofpel than the law and gofpel of Jefus Chrift. This turning to the Lord muft be with fincerity, with the heart as well as with the tongue; for God who judges doth fearch the heart, and nothing but fincerity can pleafe him.—If we do obferve thefe means of prefervation they will be effectual, and the wifdom of God will guide and keep us, fo that we need not fear either the devices of the evil, or what men can do unto us. May the Lord keep us that we may ferve him in fincerity all the days of our lives. AMEN.
