ADVENTURERS AND DISCOVERERS.

The impulse of discovery was strongly prevalent along the sea-coast of the "known world" at the time Columbus conceived the project of proving the roundness of the earth. Yet it was not simply this which moved him. Beyond this there was a hope and ambition to find a water-way from Europe to the East Indies. And this seems to have been the ruling motive of many of his successors. Balboa missed it only by the width of the Panama Isthmus. The Cabots followed the coast line from Carolina to Labrador in the same vain effort. Hudson's hopes rose high when he sailed into his namesake river; higher still when he found himself within the broad expanse of Hudson Bay. But before Magellan was ready to cry "Eureka," as the current of a far southern strait washed his ship into the beautiful Pacific Ocean, both men and nations began to realize that this bootless ambition, though founded in ignorance and error, had nevertheless served a purpose of good to the world. It had stimulated, as nothing else perhaps would have done, the exploration and outlining of a New Continent.

1600-1732.

THE COLONIES.

Spain, following in the wake of Columbus' discoveries, occupied the West Indies, Mexico, and parts of South America, with Florida and California very little else of United States territory. Wherever they occupied, their impress is seen to-day. The French entered the St. Lawrence and followed it up to the great lakes, explored all the regions thereabouts, followed the current of many another river, and at last discovered the Mississippi's grand waterway. Hence their forts and the stations established by the Jesuit missionaries extended from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. Between these two, the French on the north, and the Spaniards on the south, the English colonized at Jamestown, at Plymouth, in New York, etc., and as soon as they had gained a firm foothold on the coast they began to move westward.

THE FRENCH AND INDIAN WAR.

Before the middle of the Eighteenth Century the French had formed a chain of forts or military posts from the lakes down the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico. Determined to hem the British in on the coast side of the Alleghany Mountains, they proceeded to occupy the valley of the Ohio.

The English, whose territorial claims almost invariably extended from the Atlantic to the Pacific, would not be likely to submit tainely to such restrictions, although their outposts in that direction consisted solely in one fort at Oswego, on Lake Ontario, and a few scattered cabins in Western Virginia. The stubborn, characteristic assertion of British rights gave the impulse westward, and made inevitable the conflict between the frontier settlements of the respective nationalities. Hence the French and Indian War.

This common danger united the hitherto independent and sometimes jealous English colonies into a confederacy recognizing many common interests.

Though England and France were nominally responsible in this war, of course the brunt of the fighting fell on the colonies. Each party in the contest sought to enlist the friendship and secure the alliance of the native tribes of Indians, which made the war much more cruel and bloody than it would otherwise have been.

England amxious to enrich hereal from the growing prosperity of her colonies, the Americans stortly maintaining that taxation without representation was injust. Another than George III on the English throne might have warded off the conflict for many a year. Still it must have come some time. For not off the scale of liberty the matural outgrowth of the vast country and the free untrameled life, but it was the invertiable inheritance of sons whose fathers had braved the trackless, danger-haunted wilderness to place the occun between themselves and the too restrictive governments of the old country. John Adams in solitary commution with his diary, and Partick Henry on the floor of the Virginia House of Brugesses, expressed the thoughts that were brewing all through the country from Maine to South Carolina at the outbreak of the wur. It is a singular fact that the latewar, seemed not to know when he was defeats for the Americans. But the lader of the Americans, our noble Wush- ington, like stouewall Jackson in the late war, seemed not to know when he was defeated, and he did know how to change reverses into advantages. With the return of prosperity came leisure of thought for more critical interest in governmental affairs, and soctional feeling entered largely into the new party divisions of the John Quincy Adams envass. The protective tarif was an irritating issue between the New England States and the South, representatively : the former naturally working protection for its own manu- licitures, and the latter as naturally warding of the tariff, which would bear so much the more heavily on them. This and other coufficting opinions gave rise to stormy debates in Congress, and sometimes caused considerable anxi- ety among the older heads and Reventines reused considerable anxi- ety among the older heads and Reventionary suges, who now compiled the back sear in polities. But there were giants in those days—in oratory and statesmanship: Heary Clay, John C. Calhonn, Daniel Webster, and the like, John Quncy Adams, with all his intellectual entiture inherited and attained, and with all his diplomatic experience and skill gained in the faithful service of his country at home and abroad, could not heby looking at things with New England eyes, and heing a conscientious adherent of a then unpopular idet, the fairf, his administration did not prove a popular one, and ended with the four years. Meanwhile, the war with the Indians in the South was	adding new luster to the military fame of his rival, and possibly an inborn hero-worship had much to do with the next exciting election.

The financial crisis consequent on Jackson's manipulation of the United States Bank was one of the inheritances of his snecessor. The Seminole War was another disagreeable piece of unitished business which fell to the lot of President Van Buren; and then the unsuccessful effort of Canada to free itself from the control of Great Britain, emisting as it did dangerous sympe- thies among the neighboring States, caused some apprehension as to the riself from the control of Great Britain, emisting as it did dangerous sympe- thies among the neighboring States, caused some apprehension as to the riself from the control of Great Britain and the United States. It required more wisdom, tact, and judgment than Van Buren is generally credited with to extribate himself and the country from all these difficulties. The Independent of Sub- treasury Bill proposed by him, as a safeguard for the Nation's funds and a check upon the speculative mania, has held the approval of all succeeding administrations except Tyler's. The poor Seminoles, who had an unfortu- nate love for their homes, were hunted down and Isin because they were hold to exchange them for others of which they knew nothing, according to the worldly wise policy that has generally prevailed in the management of the Indiany, and an arry was sent to the Ganadain frontier to prevent any breach of neutrality. Still Van Buren was blaned for all the misfortunes of his administration, and nothing could hinder the growing distavor of the	bemotiats. The whiles were successful this time in placing their hist canur- date in the chair.

The annexation of Texas, which was the closing act of the last adminis- tration, meant, as everybody knew, war with Mexico. As that war was successful, it meant this much more, that New Mexico and California, as well as Texas, became part of the United States, extending its territory in one broad belt from ocean to ocean. The organizing of the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, through the beneficent gift of an eminent philanthropist of England, "for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men," and the final settlement of the Northwestern boundary between the United States, and the final as the structur of the nation since the Revolution there had been nothing comparable to the gold mania of California. The interest excited was universal, extending far beyond the limits of the United States, and eusing the new, young territory to spring into a full-fielded, populous State in an incredibly short time. Toward the close of this administration an important addition was made to the Preident's Cabinet by the establishment of the Department of the Interior. (rivil-service reform is an issue which has entered largely into a good many presidential campaigns, but one which the Executive bas always found very difficult to manage. To the country it means whether men shall be re- tained and promoted in office according to the value and profetency of their satisfield and promoted in office according to the value and profetency of their maintaining the party in power. It is only natural that the people should maintaining the party in power. It is only natural that the people should cannor for the former, and notices so that those who are seeking to hold the highest offices in the party in power. It is sould profetiency of their policy had held unbroken sway since the time of Jackson; their motto. "To the ritors belong the spoils." It is easy to see how fruitfully it tends to cor- tingtion. They are some faithinh effort, according to promise, to turn the inde, but without avail. Whatever may have been darified's purpose in the matter, his supremary was all too short to make much bedawy through the claunorus througs of office-seekers, when, like Lincoln he was cut down by due would the sympathy of the Previols country. The virtual mest between root matin could have been growing somewhat dimmer with the passing years. It was no longer a question of a civil or military method of reconstructing the South, for even the Cotion States had thoroughly adjusted themselves to the contingencies of free labor, and many of the thoughtful began to realize that master, as well as slave, was free. The question between state sovereigntly of the central government had also been virtually had to rest. The most distinct rallying cry for the next election was the tariff.

His party was committed to evil- service reform, and from a boy he himself had won his way by "courage and housery." He needed it all to settle the usual rabile of office-cekers, and the eriticisan than he was currying favor with Republicans for the next offe- tion was proof positive of his latitudiness to his principles. NOTE.—We can not claim in so limited a space to have given all or even the best of the books that have been written, for where shall we find a standard of best in which all will agree! There is indeed such an embarrassment of riches that we could attempt nothing more than simply to dip into an ocean of good things, and offer to our friends what seemed to us a fair sample of what is being written and read.

MATTERS OF INTEREST BEFORE CONGRESS.

The financial depression, attributed by many to the Sherman Act, will demand first attention. Free coinage, silver standard, repeal of the Sherman Act, bimetalism, etc., are questions that will probably come before the extra session of Congress called for in August.

Hawaian annexation is still an open question. The request for closer relations to the United States came from a provisional government, and just how far this expresses the wish of the people has not yet been satisfactorily demonstrated, and no permanent move can be made in the matter until it is.

The Chinese Exclusion Bill stands before the public somewhat thus:

1868. Burlingame Treaty between United States and China:

Special provisions also stipulated for entire liberty of conscience and worship for Americans in China and Chinese in America; for joint efforts against the Coolie trade; for the enjoyment by Chinese in America and Americans in China of all rights in respect to travel and residence awarded to ettizens of the most favored nations.

1880. In modification of the above:

Article I. Whenever in the opinion of the Government of the United States the coming of the Chinese laborers to the United States, or their residence therein, affects or threatens to affect the interests of that country, to endanger the good order of the said country, or of any locality within the territory thereof, the Government of China agrees that the Government of the United States may regulate, limit, or suspend such coming or residence, but not absolutely prohibit it.

article Ho of same. Chinese subjects—teachers, students, merchants, etc.—and Chinese laborers who are now in the United States, shall be allowed to go and come of their own free will and accord.

Article IV of same. If such measures as enacted are found to work hardships upon the subjects of China, the Chinese Minister at Washington may bring the matter to the notice of the Secretary of State of the United States, who will consider the subject with him.

1892. Chinese Exclusion Bill passed by Congress:

That from and after the passage of this act it shall be unlawful for any Chinese person or persons, whether subjects of the Chinese Empire or otherwise, as well as those who are now within the limits of the United States, and who may hereafter leave the United States and attempt to return as those who have never been here, or, having been here, have departed from the United States (save and excepting only the following classes, that is to say, such Chinese persons as may be duly accredited to the Government of the United States, as ministers plenipotentiary or other diplomatic representatives, consulsgeneral, consular and commercial agents, including other officers of the Chinese or other governments traveling on the business of the Government, with their body and household servants), to come to or within or to land at any port or place within the United States, whether for the purpose of transit or otherwise, excepting the classes hereintofore specifically described and excepted, from and after the passage of this act, be and the same is hereby absolutely prohibited.

It is to be hoped leisure may be found in the near future to reshape the various treaties and acts in such way as will reconcile them one with the other, and with the requirements of international justice, without any sacrifice of the nation's real good.

Italy King Humbert I. Bulgaria Prince Ferdinand. Roumania Prince Charles I. Montenegro Prince Nicholas. Servia...... King Alexander. Austria and Hungary, Emperor Franz Josef.

NOTE.

With the Cabinet officers the State given is that with which their public life was identified rather than the one in which they were born, where they were not the same. We deemed this more just, and it will doubtless prove more satisfactory. In a few cases we have made the same exception with reference to writers for similar reason. Otherwise the State given is the birthplace.
